Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Milstead in view of the admitted prior art. Regarding claims 1 and 4 Milstead US 5,362,193 teaches a method of moving a portable batching plant comprising the steps of:

securing a vertical frame to a vehicle;

mounting a lift member within the frame;

selectively driving the lift member between upper and lower positions. Milstead does not teach mounting a frac blender on the lifting member. The admitted prior art teaches mounting a frac blender on a pivotal mount for allowing the blender to be lowered into a working position. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art, at the time of invention to modify the steps taught by Milstead by placing a frac blender on the lift member as taught by the admitted prior art in order to allow the device to place the blender in the proper operating position without needing to use more space on the bed of the truck than the size of the blender requires.

Regarding claims 2,3,5 and 6 Milstead further teaches the steps of providing a slip connection between the lift member and both the vertical frame support member and the drive member for lifting the device.

The prior art made of record and not relied upon, but considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure is: Stewart 1995, Lhoest 1999, Picarello 2002, and Fox 2002.
